Post from the Past highlights postcards drawn from the archival collections at the University of Florida Governor's House Cultural Center and Museum. Exhibited in a gallery that served as a Post Office from 1937-1966, the postcards show how tourism has affected the development and growth of St. Augustine, Florida. Displaying both the historic images and inscriptions left by their senders, Post from the Past presents a personal history of St. Augustine's beloved locations as they have been explored by the city's many visitors. Post from the Past was organized by students in Flagler College's Gallery Management class, in conjunction with the Governor's House Cultural Center and Museum, and was supported in-part by the Flagler College Department of Visual and Performing Arts and University of Florida Historic St. Augustine, Inc.
